Quote of the Day

"Democratic leaders had set a goal of issuing their legislative manifesto by November 2005 to give voters a full year to digest their proposals. But some Democrats protested that the release date was too early, so they put it off until January. The new date slipped twice again, and now House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (Calif.) says the document will be unveiled in 'a matter of weeks.' "

"Even the party's five-word 2006 motto has preoccupied congressional Democrats for months. 'We had meetings where senators offered suggestions,' Reid said. 'We had focus groups. We worked hard on that. . . . It's a long, slow, arduous process.' "
